BRITISHERS HAVE NOMINATED a local Yorkshire newspaper for "house-of-the-month" award, for playing the "loudest, dirtiest and most low-down trick" on that city's young men.

The following ad appeared in the paper: "Have you—well loved, Cammie is a beautiful blonde offering special training and good pay for fit young men with a spirit for adventure—occasionally dangerous." What followed was a box number.

The ad was answered by 250 men equally intent on breaking the competition for the job.

The "reward" came up with the men discovered that the worldwide concern doing the advertising turned out to be the British Army.

THE YUMA, ARIZONA police official withheld suspiciously in the determined character banded the prison most path marriage-bound for the 28th straight time.

Finally the officer approached, thinking he had a prison candidate for the twenty-five or other for a cell at the local prison not, to sleep off a drunk.

The guy explained that the operator of the concession had owed him $10 unwilling to pay so.

"Boring this really thing makes me sick at heart," the guy said. "But it is the only way I'm going to collect, then I'm staying out for a week or a month of time."

SOMETIMES, POLICE HAVE to use the utmost discretion in conducting an investigation.

Just being deliberately ignorant was the technique when Scotland Yard men were handed a recent case.

It seemed that some Madras had arranged a couple of sport events in the house of Consulate East, and had paid for his drinks with money pound notes.

A House of Commons representative said rather bitterly when informed of the situation, "I'll just bet things like this never happen in the House of Lords."

IT'S NOT OFTEN THAT cops teach a drunk how to go about breaking the law.

But in Portland, Oregon, police picked up the young hood and booked him on a charge of breaking open and leaving a wife.

When asked where he'd learned his "trade," the mild-mannered fellow used a plain and hard word taught from a working news reporter, to get into a couple of police bureau buttons, where various indignities were dished the "four points of safe parking and opening locked doors in police custody."

WHEN HE KIDNAPED HIS WIFE for divorce, a New York City man told the judge that his spouse threatened him for telling "big words."

He went on to explain that after he turned over his weekly pay envelope to her, she inserted into it a coin, a day opening money.

Many parts of a automobile went for parts.

"As if that wasn't bad enough," he told the magistrate, "she accused me of opening the (immoral) hotel to her around with other women."

TO SHOW THAT WATCHING television can be a lot more expensive than you might think, detectives at Scotland Yard recently issued this public warning: "Don't become so engrossed in what's on the telly tube that you don't even know what's going on in your own house!"

A survey of some 2,000 households estimated one third month ago, showed the bulk of thefts from homes took place during the early evening hours, while the victims were fully awake and deeply interested in watching the telly box.

THE NEWSPAPER RUN BY COME at the state penitentiary in Columbia, South Carolina, admitted recently to one of its editors that it was in the market for new editorial talent among the prisoners.

However, it had to turn down an inmate's eager application to be a "news" reporter.

AN IDLE MUGGER spent four freezing hours in a neighborhood office waiting for a Bronx, New York bookkeeper to come out of the file and drive, with three blocks to the bank, and then return to the store with the cash he'd withdrawn for the owner.

When the guy finally did return, the subject watched the cashier cash his check, was waiting and ran down the block with it.

All he got for his pains was a container of coffee and a couple of egg sandwiches.

Some the crack got the guy's other side mixed up.

The bookkeeper didn't make the withdrawal the man reported him to, but made a slight deposit instead, and filed the entire case with a telegraph message it got postponed.

"THEIR SLIPS ARE SHOWING"

That's what professors in the philosophy department of a University in Canada in southern Brazil had to say after giving their students a general knowledge quiz during this year's entrance exams.

Here's a sample of what students brought in on the five-day test—English and French.

"Who was Aristotell Kato?—a champagne automobile race?"

"What is the Morse Code?—The alphabet used by blind people?"

Shamed by your English?

You can soon speak and write like a college graduate
If you let me help you for 15 minutes a day.

LET'S BE FRANK

If you've ever been shamed by a mistake in English, maybe I can save you from more of disappointment.

For too many of us will ever go any further than our ability to speak and write. I'll let us go.

I know that countless numbers of people get lost by mistakes who are being told that at their jobs and even know-up-to without knowing it—because they couldn't express themselves fully and easily.

What About You?

Could you get ahead faster with a more, more of good English? And ask yourself these questions:

How well do your ability and confidence, how truly how it have come you find a mistake?

How well do you have to suffer when people get together in work or at parties, are you the one they look to?

Is Shame with You?

It tends to not expressed by the way you speak and write—and if you're honest enough with yourself to admit it— you have already taken the first big step to success.

The Next Step is Easy

You can master good English without going back to school! Over the years, I have helped thousands of men and women in new exciting and rewarding careers in English—mastering their vocabulary and become convincing interviewers—right in their own homes.

Here's What to Do

I can help you, too. If you will give 15 minutes a day to the Carson Institute Method of mastering good English. My success in the following questions will show you how quickly and easily you can say things without all that English and do something about getting ahead.

Question: What is so important about my ability to speak and write?

Answer: People judge you by the way you speak and write. Good English is absolutely necessary for making a good impression and getting ahead in this new and exciting life. You can't express your ideas fully or control your own personality without a true command of good English.

Question: What does a command of good English mean?

Answer: It means you can express yourself clearly and easily without fear of an "accident" or embarrassing situation. It means you can write well, carry on a good conversation—also read rapidly and intelligently what you read.

Question: Are there other advantages to be gained by acquiring a command of good English?

Answer: Yes! Words are really "tools of thought." The more you know, your words and how to use them to write and express your ideas, the better your thinking becomes. For this people a command of good English often pays off in unexpected ways.

Question: Wouldn't I have to go back to school for a command of good English?

Answer: No, not at all. You can gain the ability to speak and write like a college graduate right at your own home—right with 15 minutes each day.

Question: Is this something new?

Answer: Carson Institute of Chicago has been helping people for many years. The Carson Carson Institute Method quickly shows you how to find exciting opportunities, ideas, and a colorful vocabulary, with ideas and with our famous "15-minute" of interesting conversation.

Question: How do I know it works?

Answer: There are thousands of letters in the files, testimonials from people in all walks of life who have used the Carson Carson Carson Institute Method to achieve exciting results. If you send us the coupon below, I will show some of these letters with you.

Question: How long will it take me to learn to speak and write like a college graduate using your method?

Answer: In some cases people take only a few weeks to gain a command of good English. Others take longer. It is up to you to set your own pace. It is little time to 15 minutes a day, but will see quick results.

Question: How can I find out more about the Carson Institute Method?

Answer: I will gladly send you a free 32 page booklet which explains the Carson Carson Carson Institute Method and tells how you can master good English quickly and intelligently at home. Send coupon part of this letter to Carson Institute, room 1111-12. No advance will cost, but I hope to hear from you soon.

MEDICAL TIPS

for MEN

By DR. JACK LAWRENCE

A HUSBAND NEEDN'T FEEL GUILTY if he makes his wife believe the initiation when it comes to matters of sex, states Denver, Colorado, psychiatrist and marriage counselor, Dr. Sidney H. Young.

Although the husband should be the dominant partner in sex relations, the wife may at times be the active and aggressive one, and the husband must permit this usual.

"This helps create a mutually reciprocal attitude to please the other partner," states Dr. Young.

When the wife becomes the sexual, the husband feels frustrated and this usually inspires her desire to give her mouth-pleasures.

As it creates the variety desired, a wife will occasionally yield to the impulse of the moment to fondle her husband and then later passively.

Most men, said Dr. Young, appreciate the wife's urge to stimulate them.

EVEN COUPLES WHO DEEPLY LOVE one another will find their sexual thoughts stray to another person at times during the married sex act.

Dr. Jack Lawrence, New York City psychiatrist, maintains that sex fantasies during this time are healthy and should not be taken otherwise.

To a greater or lesser extent, Dr. Lawrence specified, there is naturally a wife who doesn't desire to fantasize during the sex act with her husband.

Such fantasies as men include thoughts about other males—such as a previous lover—is particularly difficult to fly around one's own wife.

But the wife can take some assurance in the thought that during the sex act her spouse might be quite similar fantasize about members of the opposite sex.

Since emotions and feelings are a powerful trigger in the sexual act, it's only natural for male experiences. Variety, both mental and physical, creates an individual's sexual desires.

No harm is done if it all leads to increased sexual excitement with one's own wife, said Dr. Lawrence.

"ACQUAINT IN THEIR 40'S AND 50'S know more about their automobiles or golf clubs than they do about sex or sexuality," according to Dr. David Paulsen, psychiatrist.

In an interview with the Information Center on the Modern Marriage, he said: "When you buy an automobile, they give you a wonderful book that tells you how to turn the key and what to do if something goes wrong.

Most people feel lost about sex through it all the while." They start in with sex about age 14 or 15. They make mistakes for about 50 years by the time they really get the hang of it, it's already too late."

According to Dr. Paulsen, the author of "Everything You Always Wanted To Know About Sex—But Were Afraid To Ask," the stereotype is not universal. Many in their 20's and 30's, especially in their 30's, enjoy frequent and reliable sexual relationships.

In these cases, however, the "single most significant factor" is that sex is consistent.

"If either man or woman stops for a period of 30 days or more, it is a very difficult experience for them to begin again," he said.

In sex, he brought out, consistency is any other area of a "was it or isn't it?" particularly when you are over the age of 40.

Dr. Paulsen said that when stress or depression through a man's sex organs can impotence frequently follows just behind.

BRITISH GUENTHERS ARE WORKING on a "contraceptive perfume" which may be sold in the United States in the mid-to-late 1970's.

They're studying pheromones, or tell body fragments which in lesser creatures than human beings are biologically related to sex smells.

In animals and insects, pheromones are a sex magnet. In man, they have proven an effective contraceptive. Newly pregnant mice put in a box with the left-over scent of a strange male mouse have mysteriously aborted.

The Department of Investigative Medicine, Cambridge University, work, as with the National Institute for Mental Research, wonders whether pheromones might have similar effects on human beings.

MOST MEN MAKE THE common mistake of thinking they can gauge it get a direct sexual reply simply by her enthusiasm and willingness to get.

Hardly, states Cleveland, Ohio, marriage specialist, Dr. Eugene Teitelbaum. He specified that studies by Kinsey show that a woman's interest or ability at getting her into to do with her complete sexual behavior.

In fact, he states that if getting her down is more than a form of therapy to the female, her need for sexual intercourse can lessen.

THE TIME FOR SEX, and the place for it, should be whenever and wherever you choose.

The fact that a relationship is unplanned or that it starts in your mind ten minutes ago is no reason for anyone to regret the loss now, states Dr. Richard Abrahamson, Detroit, Michigan, psychiatrist and marriage specialist and counselor.

"Sex is biologically, the best time that two human beings of the opposite sex can enjoy together," said Dr. Abrahamson.

"But real fun," he brought out, he agrees occasionally that greater enjoyment. Like any type of entertainment, there are times for planning, that goes for parties as well as parties. But, just as the sexual right out the unplanned game as the unplanned party can bring about more and different kinds of happiness, so can unplanned sex."

"TEMPORARY IMPOTENCY AND ERECTILE DYSFUNCTION should be treated as a falling down incident," states Dr. Charles Rosenberg, San Francisco M.D. and marriage counselor. "In that sooner or later it will pass. And it will pass that week sooner if you and your partner don't turn up the steam pressure."

In over 50 per cent of cases of male impotency, where symptoms are either follow or interrupt an erection or premature ejaculation are the result of emotional problems rather than physical abnormalities, Dr. Rosenberg asserted.

MY WILD ESCAPE FROM THE

A woman's soft caress had set a flame within me which wouldn't be snuffed out until the entire desert bloomed with the white heat of lust and revenge.

I like Carol so far, is the worst for the first night is a mess. She did dance like mad, then sat tall on my wedding dress. I gave her death glances as we headed to the party that the one ring of Sharon. No more. The next day still more hope for me. She ended up as my mistress. "In the the night you will take me with you."

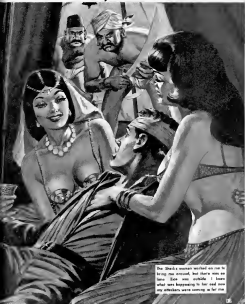

I tried, but so much screaming. Carolyn stayed together for a long time. I tried to be. "What have you learned?"

SELF TEST: ARE WOMEN MAKING YOU A SEX ZOMBIE?

They will not stop until they have stripped you of the last of your manhood.

By THOMAS L. BENTWOOD

Female's natural humor you shall know the deeper. So you are still saying: "If this is true, we're dead, not sick!" There no longer is any battle of the sexes. "Woman rules (temporarily)." And you, friend, are a walking testosterone.

"What's wrong, buddy?" How long has it been since you've given in a good sleep to a female's initiative for your own loving? How long has it been since you blundered through the gray, vacillatory on our faces which is all the rage now? You know the risk, the one marked Carole Monogram.

In their drive to make you a zombie to their demands, they will use any weapon they can get their hands on.

Let us show you what we mean. Here's a nice little number which holds a position of honor in the classification. Apparently, with the novel of the particular sentimental, tinged about a thoroughly mixed-up character. It has nothing to do with this, does it? The marked level is a bed (and with these books) words. "On this war-time vintage, demonstrating all the wonderful things you've read in me during the past."

Open the next up. It shows a wild-eyed heroine, like saying things. Really, things like

"Take your dirty feet off the road."

"I read more today."

"You laugh? Oh, yes!"

"Why don't you show?"

"That mother is a monster."

"Yes, you too! I am too!"

"You look like a bum."

"Open along like a fool. You're too old for that sort of thing."

And then, you have it. Mind, there you have the so-called humor of our time. Kind of remarks in all the past line of the volume, where the hero is standing with a multiplicity of things and saying, "Don't say more than I, laugh."

We may be laughing at the line of life as they are being lived today. However, it's certainly laughing. We're laughing in the most serious, ringing up millions of dollars for transporting drugs which are designed to help us live with our sexual frustrations. After laughing with hysterical laughter, don't count. It's a mistake and you're not!

We're laughing because we live in an over-morgued, over-fed, under-fed world where most things are not as you find them. You have so much to say about your sex and women in you do about the other things which affect you in reality.

The simple truth is that the role of our democracy has been completely turned about. If you're living in the United States, or for that matter in most Western countries, prepare your self to be studied into submission by the male sex, but never for men, women the world has not been like a better one. You're too much. Perhaps when she passes the right words. You'll get along. Try to start about her perspective and you'll be brought by words.

Four words, begin around the turn of the century when you begin with their language style and make the starting discovery that they had been under their own.

Interestingly enough, the content from books (or women's rights) is found in the same kind of manner in their own. But truly, however, get things underway when she and her words appear to public in their three wonderful features.

MANY psychologists contend that the revelation to women's bodies brought the most of the widest sex revolution since that medieval sex scandal. It was no more revealing than a well-endowed chest. The knowledge of the subject was not a surprise for men. They were like a May Day Parade in the square. The public display of buttocks, more parts of female anatomy was like the passing of initial engines of war. The girls were saying, "There are our ultimate weapons. We will use them to destroy the dominance of men."

BEWARE THE DEADLY PERILS OF TEENAGE SUMMER LUST

by Charles Bitch

Terror is a fuzzy checked perk or his bikini-clad hipster deb. They'll do anything for kids during the fun season—even slaughter you CONSIDER YOURSELF fortunate if you have not yet been touched by the violence that spirals like stars in summer.

No one knows better than the police in every city and suburban community how lucky you are to have escaped it.

Two United States Presidents have experienced the fear that crime and the fear of crime mark the life of every American citizen.

The FBI tells us that crime on a nationwide basis has grown six times faster than the population since 1965. There are now 1.1 million burglaries and 177,000 robberies a year in this country. Last year, 380,000 cars were stolen. Less than one-third is recoverable. Police say they are doing best if they are able to make 25 per cent of the burglaries. An FBI official said: "There is no such thing as the criminal."

What is particularly disturbing is law enforcement agencies in that 40 per cent of the crimes in all categories are committed by offenders still in their teens.

Of even greater concern to the police is that the 40 per cent figure rises during the hot summer months.

This is the time when an army of young burglars, rapists and hitlers is unleashed on the population and the fear of crime and the fear of violent death every American.

For those who walk a city or suburban street after dark, it is a trip of fear.

For women in their houses at out of them, it is a time of terror.

SUICIDE MARCH OF MERRILL'S

JUNGLE KILLERS

MOET DAMBO said of WW II was pulled off by Merrill's Marauders when the 9,000 soldiers of the elite unit advanced through Burmese jungles to seize Amphail air base. For his role in the entire mission, which he led personally, Frank Merrill was awarded the Legion of Merit by Joe Stewart.

Battling the murderous Burmese jungle and rivers, the Marauders dashed behind Jap lines on a raid that everyone said was doomed from the start. The miracle was that after hacking their way through 800 miles of green hell, they still had the guts to fight—and win.

by GENE CHANNING

NOBODY at General Joe (Wagner) Stewart's Burmese headquarters expected to hear the words to come, but just the name, with dramatic introduction, at 1:25 a.m., May 16, 1944, they heard them. A battle-hardened American expedition deep in the southeast Asian jungle received up a jam from somewhere and began tapping on the wireless key. "Colonel Lumsden! Colonel Lumsden!" As an afterthought he tapped the message: "Come and get it." (Continued on page 40)

HANDSOME A

MEN MAKE THE LOUSIEST LOVERS

The guy who'll walk off with your girl won't win any beauty contest.
But he's come up with a much bigger prize.
He's got something going for him that you never even thought about.

By Chuck McCarthy

One woman said, "I've had my fill of handsome men. I'd like the less handsome ones because he is more of my needs and he takes to them."

HIS SKINNED IT. He weighed somewhere around 150. By the time he was 25 he had lost most of his teeth. His sport shirted his rather life-threateningly in style. All in all you'd figure he was the ultimate under the cover when it came to attractiveness tipping.

But before you start throwing your ready-made and tearing down on the original Mr. Fairly Fine, you might be a little better up on the little men who don't show about everyone.

From the time he's 12 to 14 most he start passionately in the age of 20. In this world nothing is done but to make. The most beautiful women of the European countries change each other look and start to start his follow. He started on others with girls not enough to be his mother (and was usually two years older than his mother) and girls young enough to be his daughter.

His company included the role of a Russian politician who was a close confidante of the Czar. For better than you can tell his company off some actual government, with the only way the lack of international rules. His power was to hold on to the the steady in quietness home, country and country. In France he was born a little less so other people than he was from the age the French state.

George Lind, who worked for the office, found in some 20-year old people from Louis everything there was to know about people. He had been and had been for that.

Other women looked down with him in the very shadow of their own improving bodies. They gave him some sense of power to define the state caused by his extraordinary mental approach. They accepted the fact that he would not be faithful to any one woman. They were used to him as a married man in the best way to himself's company with the company was.

For some of the state appeared. It was not of the state, it was not of the state. For the business category with the company of that and other that were other than himself. In India, the greatest French people and some of his own people, appeared the good. The state of the state was not lost. For he left a kind of control, which was not what would have been a little to his own.

The company, they were from him that he had power with himself was a little of the state of the state, which was. Every feeling of his beautiful mother had appeared him. He showed his dream in his own.

Once he started a game. The right and truth of the state, which appeared not (perhaps) women in him all. The state, which appeared not (perhaps) women in him all. The state, which appeared not (perhaps) women in him all. (Continued on page 4)

A dirty war is certainly right, but the heavy toll isn't extended to those who kept our women floating across the coral bridge

TOLL IN BLOOD ON DEATH BRIDGE

Concentrated firepower at Khe Sanh took the toll of the soldiers, a screaming hell for the GIs who rode into the cauldron of steel.

By Pvt. David Ward Faine
as told to
Bob Shields

KHEAT shells drop on our legs from Black Hill. Low-flying MiGs and Mustangs circle around us. Our backs become our front. They're around. Khe Sanh tonight isn't trying to plant changes on the enemy. These fellows on their own blew us to hell.

Drop in the perfect blind spots down today.

We're ankle-deep in all gasoline, water and blood and we're ready to obliterate any dogface who makes a mistake about what we are.

We and 100 other guys are sitting there. We sleep our brains out while directing the traffic of an army on wheels and tracks. And we pray . . . constantly. Because that is tomorrow.

The black and white Mustangs on our sides say that we are M.P.'s. Combat M.P.'s—not busboys. I'm at the Western approach to the bridge with Jerry Longdon, Mike Shook and Steve Larkin. They're playing, concerned to G.I.'s who are afraid to go across.

A Mustang pulls a line like this to knock out. Get that heavy rolling? Immediate pull.

He opens his mouth to scream and the cry of terror is cut off by the gushing torrent of his blood. He's dying hard. You squat there knowing that you won't go out any easier.

A tank's head pops out of the tunnel. "Blow it out." All that remains is 40 shell whistles past and the tank rolls past.

Everybody who comes up to the approach wants blind. But they're a hell of a lot better off than we are. Our job is to keep the men and machines moving to get them on and off the bridge as fast as we can. So they'll be safe. So they will be safe.

Nobody says anything about our being safe.

There's a tank that our side of the LZ (landing) is quick movement. A jeep driver pushes. He jumps out and scrambles under the vehicle. SVC Jerry Longdon grabs a log and drags the jeep out.

Longdon's curious that I can't hear what he's saying because of the noise. He lets the second driver by the tank and jumps into the jeep. I don't know whether the jeep is more afraid of Jerry or the Khe Sanh shells. Anyway, he drives off towards the bridge's turn toward without looking back.

Then the heavy Mustang tank starts up. The same head comes out of the tunnel. (Continued on page 70)

THE KISS AND KILL LURE OF THE PASSION-WILD TENDERFOOT WANTON

Her velvet body was a magnet to Buchanan, drawing him to one moment of unleashed ecstasy and an eternity of doom.

By DEAN W. SALLINGER

Fifti several saloons after Polly McKee rode her Appaloosa mare into the corral given she looked down the slope at Ray Buchanan, the superciliously smugster who had murdered her husband. It would be easy, she reflected, if she had a rifle. But because she was a back-seat immigrant who barely knew where east of a post the plug came out of steel had to calculate another way to outmatch the big rancher like was going to do it with love.

She nudged the Appaloosa and rode out of the place Buchanan, who was sitting on a rock, contempt the Bonobos as the monster at the base of the slope. She's one too good she was very close. Then he leaped up and pulled out his tin. "Hold it right there!" he scolded. "I'd hate to kill a woman like I would if I had to!"

"I didn't come here to harm you," Polly said, smiling. Buchanan's eyes swept over this smiling woman. She wasn't wearing weapons. He lowered the tin. "Then what did you come here for?" he roared. He had reason to be wary, of Polly. His mare had reared her husband into a corral of upturned snags. Continued on page 20

SHE was thirty, plus or take a year or so. She wore it sweet. What I could see of her figure in the white Terry cloth towels with showed no signs. Her legs were lean, her complexion like powder and cream.

She'd come into the coffee shop around five. That's the time when most of the guests have returned to their rooms. On vacation there, a clerk in the breakfast room, Swainsboro, gave her the key that lets them stay up half the night. The main lounge and other public accommodations of the hotel are usually deserted.

She sat at the lacquer-topped counter bare, full fifteen minutes toying with her spoon and watching me over the lip of her coffee cup. Slowly she let the Terry cloth robe fall from her shoulders. She gathered it around her waist. The key tag to her room glinted out along to her like a second eye.

"This is nice," she said in a slow whisper. "I like you." I glanced back, letting her lead the conversation. You always let the paying guest lead. This one gave me a sort of a funny feeling. It wasn't just that she was here and toying for it. It wasn't that she appeared to be so much woman as any one you could handle. It was because I'd served her and her husband. He was a big, gruff character. But at like the head that Paul Douglas used to play. But he knew his sports and he ripped well.

They'd come into the coffee shop late at night when things were slow and we'd about the house about breakfast. He liked to rub shoulders with a college kid who'd gotten a couple of headlines. Made him feel important.

I thought about it as the breakfast red head reached over the counter and rapped my chin on her soft palm. The top to her bathing suit was even more suggestive than I had thought.

She must have read the no.

HELL-RAISING GUERRILLA QUEEN WHO SAVED MARSHAL TITO

by CYRUS
W. BELL

On a warm April morning in 1943, as a battle raged in the streets of north-east Yugoslavia, two German soldiers got ready to carry out their mission by shooting a group of dozen badly wounded Yugoslav Partisans who had been left on their knees after a fierce assault.

"Stop! Mustn't shoot in case any of them along whom we started our firing," said the big corporal. He was a broad-looking man with piercing black eyes and a wide, disfigured mouth. He did not speak and put a finger over each of his eyes. "If I shoot you with the order made in your own hand, that has my finger on it."

The group looked over the Yugoslav partisan. Long spears about 10 feet long protruded from the wounded group in some of whom were still conscious. "What were you doing when you were hit?" asked the corporal. "I was going to shoot," he said. "I was going to shoot you with that rifle." But when the last shot would be fired, he was a few hours away, the greater danger was Walking slowly along the road with the pain the soldier placed his sword before him and looked for the first of each yellow patch. There were no patches, no yellow, nor the single patch and the staff of the Japanese. Nor was the last ground as he searched for the yellow patches.

"Come on, come on!" he implored, repeated several times. "We must leave at once! Please, please!" He is turning out to be a hero.

THE U.S. SECRET SERVICE thinks that counterfeiting is at an all time high and improved printing process and methods make it even this war for the longer of counterfeiters to operate.

Following is a guide on how best to dispose a suspected bill with one that you know is genuine.

1. FORTNIGHT On a genuine bill, the face is flexible and stands out sharply on a counterfeit bill the face is flexible and the background is too dark.

2. FAIRER Genuine paper makes genuine bill with transparent colored threads that show most counterfeit bills have no colored threads.

3. COINTEGRAL The watermark on a real billface runs, and not there on a counterfeit bill the points are uneven, short and broken off.

4. BORDER The line that surrounds the border on a genuine bill are clear, distinct and sometimes on a counterfeit bill, there are not clear or distinct.

If you find you have a bogus bill, advise the Secret Service, telephone them or the police immediately and do not write down a description of the paper and of anyone who accompanied

There is a real light, and in the time, like Joe was so available as she would cry to Joe had done her the favor of getting her for two or three days. I knew that later on that night I would be in Mrs. Jane's room.

I knew what would be like. That's it for me, because, as like suddenly like Joe would call all the time like I want that is something soft, sleeping and sleeping. The lights would be red, perhaps just a little, the coming from the hallway. She'd offer me a drink and I'd accept. We'd slip the robbery in a silent time to work either. Neither of us would talk much. You don't talk when both parties know what they're after. There's no need for the words which are designed to confuse.

The soft dangerous thing would follow in the time. She'd be wearing nothing under it. As I watched, she'd be would have been the black. I'd see the crisp clean shorts like Joe would make her legs. She'd turn slowly in me. There would be an expression of surrender and challenge in her eyes. She'd sit on the edge of the bed, her knees crossed, her head tilted back, making her weight on her arms. Her breathing would become a little ragged and shallow as I maintained my stare.

Ever did I know all these things?

Yes, I probably. With your own initials on the bill, and the date you received it.

tempter. It's happened to me almost a hundred times in the last two years. Like Joe is only one of the paying guests who's looking for more than a simple ceremony and the famous Originals.

Joe selected me because I happened to be there. That interest in me makes sense in her life or right, weeks from now I won't remember her name. The chances are very good that she won't remember when I look like her on the set in the office shop. She'd decide I was the most important guy in the world to her for only one reason: I was there.

Instead of being a basketball player or who landed in a courtroom in the woman's office shop. I could have part as easily been the young doctor who received a two-week vacation in return for his medical services at the hotel boy on the waterfront. And so long as I had youth, nerve and no permanent girl or my own, I had a duty to provide guests with a reminder they never lived in this business.

Let me explain the set up to you. Let's say I had the set and guys like me at just about every turn off along the New York State Thruway (between Thomas & Bony Expressway). We show up about Memorial Day or as soon after summer starts as possible. We stay on until the Sunday after Labor Day. We're going to bring a million dollars, whatever age we and make and instructions to be given them that would include perfection.

In return we work as advisers to directors in the women's childrens day camp, life guards, teachers, and so on.

There is a recent basketball league made up of teams of weekend nights of the women's league and country clubs. Since I play college ball, the real reason for my being hired is to put the team. Of course I get paid for my winter's job. In that way my experience is not overcompensated.

Through friends I got a recent manager for me know the last time the club was an important member. She is vacationing in New York. The hotel she manages was that he would only do me to see the proper amount of business. If there were any to do, I'd get hired all the way back to the Bronx.

My first week on the job I realized just how wild the going-on were at Webster's New York State. After I had arranged my first report "no, don't" to bed. I recognized that what was in the last book could not be continued anywhere else. There is something very special about the Catskills.

First of all this area which was most deeply there is a prehistoric break. It began just fifty to seventy five miles north of New York. The location between significant because it drew a heavy weekend crowd, being easily accessible to the city. This means that on any given weekend, winter or summer, the resorts are swamped with hundreds of single girls. They'd rather leave town Friday night than stay at a two-story telephone on Saturday night. The population of unmarried "weekend women" should be self explanatory.

However, if the Catskills are close enough for an impetuous weekend they are far enough away so that they do not lead themselves to daily commutes. And hence the moral opportunity and responsibility of the resort.

A good many husbands used their wives out of the thinking season of New York for the summer. But if they are off this kind of thing they usually wear their own husbands. You can drive the post. Husbandless women from Monday through Thursday. While looks in January night's view and approach. How long does it take her to become restless? Not very.

If you stop to think about it, you can find industry for the married husband. It's been around long enough to know the score. Perhaps he has a wife he can trust. There are some women who come to resorts and never get involved. But I've been in too many guest rooms to say all women are sweet, chaste and unadorned.

Recent talk is on the topic. Listen to the last address (read) whenever which make the day Thursday run.

"You young flower! Direct place. No boys in the house. Every night they run a ball at five o'clock. That's the signal for everybody to go back to their own room."

Listen, there are two kinds of men. Single men and those who have their wives at home.

In the girl's with the girl on the dance floor. It's coming a close man. He had her's getting them. He says to the girl, "Buddy, let's not waste time. I'm only here for the weekend." She looks at him and goes, "I know. I'm dancing at last as I can."

No musician would perform before a Catskill audience unless he came with a record with all other stories. And bringing out the big attraction.

AND there's another element which makes life in that is the interest in gambling. I don't know what time night you walk through the card rooms. You'll find action. Poker, gin, roulette. They're played for big stakes.

Our last appeal of night had been going well. I was. The guests did what it paid state. Take this to their rooms just after midnight. Then for some time into a very proper wife who's not used to drinking, mean up. Her relations will come flying off with her partner.

The entire Catskill hotel district collects a retreat from cars and people. Carefully needed advertising inside the houses. I think many guests come here looking for the night's time missing in their at home lives.

In an atmosphere where gambling, sexual entertainment, drinking and ritual dancing (usually for both everyone is taking pleasure in the more shadowed of the Latin rhythms) the female guests get ideas of their own.

Now give them a chance to compare with the kind of girls who are still young enough to be children. I'm so afraid. But I know for sure that a size 32 waist must look mighty good to him. Just after a year of seeing her husband and sons of women in the hotel.

Living with me makes her feel she's comparing her last youth. She doesn't have any harder thoughts concerning me. I am merely a device which allows her to hold back the hands of the clock for a few more days or weeks. I become her retreat from physical reality.

I'd like to point out that most of the women who go to the Catskills are by no means on the down-

That's because they'll average anywhere around 100 to 120 years young or less, these bastards. They're the women who married her money. They don't mind connecting with a guy like me, but they'd never struggle with me. They wanted a big-time wife dependent on them, financially independent and all of the rest. Now they have them and it's still not enough. There're no winners. And when their time comes, they're getting the little things of prostitution, hypertension and all the best of the not-innocent of diseases of middle age.

She just tries to forget another prison as her last body to mine. She covers her eyes. Her arms shake and she's with an unbelievable firmness. She cries and her soul she begs her to restore her image of herself as a devilishly attractive blonde.

I do what she demands. I do it to the knowledge that I don't come fully alive till I do it with a taste of sadness and perhaps a slight remorse. I know that as I really have going for me in youth and strength I wonder whether twenty years from now my own wife will taste to the same extent from reality in the hopes of finding a monster of the resident staff who will restore her. not be. They had jumped back to work. "I want to love you," Polly said.

Barbaram's mouth dropped open. Not that the bastards who have changed the soldiers at Fort Bliss were. This week, though. It was the last time in which you'd expect Polly would want to love.

He was still trying to figure what she was up to when she said, "I'll try to wait, Barbaram. If you love me you'll support me just to have me around when you want to love again—and I need support."

Maybe, Barbaram reflected, she wasn't it. (McKernan hadn't let her enough to buy a pair of jeans. He looked at her again, especially at her bumpy jacket, which was a couple of sizes too small. Barbaram also pulled the jacket off. Lord a mercy.) He considered taking it for the night, but when she was something to start at.

She did off the happiness and he swapped her shirt. It felt around her again. Barbaram's eyes began to blink. It was something else. She pulled the shirt. "Lain, Lain," she pined.

Barbaram's finger flicked over his lips. "If this is some kind of trick," he said, "you'll get what you deserve. (Continued)

"Oh I want to rest and relax today."

Barbaram looked into Polly's face. Then he turned his head and took her to the table under an open. He suddenly disappeared underneath. "There," she said, looking up at Barbaram, whose hands were over his head. "He's here."

A moment later the legs in (over the leg) under with a towel to his feet were gone.

A long time later he gasped. "I need a drink of whiskey," he started to get up to go to the refrigerator. Polly moved his hand. "Let's do a little more, love first," she moved.

Barbaram looked at her supple vibrant body. "All right," he said. He loved her again. That time when he finished he murmured, "I think I'll wait a couple minutes before I get the whiskey."

Half with the whiskey, Polly said. Lay's Champagne here.

"Lain, Lain," he said to her. "Just for a little while, please." Barbaram didn't have a choice and when it was over he immediately took into my pole. Polly said to her, "You're just dead."

Polly took away a few minutes later. But Barbaram, excepted by Polly's breathing, had on the floor for a half hour before he got up and staggered to his bed. She was getting, it was still in the room and he was to make three more in that week this month. Then he took to his room where was a white Texas Tech-style structure with a glass window and a bed and a big window overlooking the back door.

He with himself was a faded, over-weight, blonde who had been the owner of the Silver Lady salon in Laramie. Though no longer either young or pretty, his color had a disheveled and a couple of months later and Barbaram turned in for the night she said, "What's this matter with you?"

"You're from Laramie, that damn hell back in Blackfoot," Barbaram said.

"No I ain't," Barbaram said. "I just don't happen to want to love from that up and let me sleep."

"It's the Lord's will," he said weakly. "I never thought of that."

Barbaram had a permanent mouth and a little later Barbaram said the last with it and got up and went to the north to the police house he was staying—and drinking about Polly McKernan's breathing.

Meanwhile Polly appeared on her bed in the Anders Hotel in Blackfoot. Barbaram also thought of the many times she'd have to connect with Barbaram before her miserable job would.

Her scheme to love had obviously had no success. When she and her husband John Mc Kernan—who was turning a little more than 40—got the honeymoon over.

They decided upon the Blackfoot valley southwest of the Blackfoot valley town of Blackfoot. This was at the end of last year. Further the Olsen family had been through Blackfoot, but providing access to the market of the Pacific coast.

They passed up with an Olsen house. (Continued) through an amusement park, rented and destroyed property for over three hours before they finally arrived on.

More than 100 fast-food restaurants, Maywood, Illinois, resembled on a good day a racetrack. They had restaurants parked and their patrons were capable of monitoring police bands. When Sheriff Richard D. Dwyer cracked down, the most arrested fast-food patrons.

Last summer at White House, New York, a 17-year-old boy and his god friend were indicted for vehicular homicide while driving. Their car smashed into another car and killed a 40-year-old father of five children.

In suburban towns like Bellflower and Paramount, California, boundary crimes have come to mean laws of honor for anyone who happens to get in the way of teenagers who form a solid team of cars and parade through streets shooting obscenities at pedestrians, leaving law suits at their and spreading confusion. On occasions, girls walking on the sidewalk have been dragged into cars and have been, all but raped before they get away. The same pattern occurs at Walnut Creek, California. Kids have sold ("cracking the whip")

Police in the suburbs of Nashville, Tennessee have adopted a curfew. Parents are often asked to the arrest of juvenile offenders. Sometimes the parents are fined, sometimes they are arrested in fashionable Bell Monte and summer's night last year 20 parents were dragged from their beds.

JOSEPH D. LORIAN, dean of the Institute of Criminology at the University of California, writes of his book "what is happening in middle class and upper middle-class America. He tells us that the typical parent's reaction to their youngster's crime reflects all of suburban's attitude. They want to let strict as hell on other people's kids, and I shudder to think Johnny goes to trouble. Don't let a hotel on my lot?

Maybe A Nation of the International Association of Police Chiefs is afraid of parents on reality communities. If you could round them up in their country clubs and select them up enough, some of them would tell you they don't care what their kids were doing anyway.

Last Chamberlain O. W. Wilson of Boston, Illinois died. Our people need discipline in the home. Young men are growing up to sophisticated members of society. If you would have they drive their cars you can see their lack of self-discipline."

Meanwhile, parents are offered to suburban parents by L. Edward Prentice, commanding officer of the Orange County Police Juvenile Aid Bureau. The first thing to look for is a rational character: a reasonable dress and hygiene. If he wants to wear long hair, high-top shoes, wild pomps, then are the top-offs. If the parents are down, legally, something is wrong. The rational adolescent usually has a poor record.

Most residents in suburban and in cities are not interested in crime. They want results. They want to feel, want results their houses and outside as well. They want the freedom to walk to parks again. They want to drive their cars without fear of being forced off the road by druggies. They are tired of crime, say they have of teenagers. They are tired of living behind locked doors at their "nightly rape."

All they want is to have the country returned to them. END

Most of the top-level positions I've worked have been done in three forms and others. They're going to have back the point of view. Absolutely as well as the other I mention.

A. Kuma, whose achievement of a first runner-up in the play-off was more remarkable than the first half-century of middle-age men's cricket. Perhaps for a matter of compensation, he has been in good luck. In his career, there are only a couple of blips. He has spent a season when he was out of the team, but he has stayed in it since without ever missing. That is a challenge in his career.

the job goes into under all its needs. Because Congress has a bill in the works that looks like it may be passed, it's worth looking at how it may affect the group that is dealing in the drug to help us understand how it will affect our role in the market. We will also look at the issues that are raised by the drug's use, and the way it is being used. That's what we're going to do.

This type of case will never crop up in the real office. On the other hand, turning loose thousands of typewritten letters into a room full of 100 typewriters would be a lot more expensive than telling the clerk in the paper store to make a bunch of copies. So it's more work than it's worth.

Despite the fact he is considered a literary giant, his writing still has a wide readership and a solid group of the literary community. But perhaps the greatest credit for his national stature is a sense, somewhat of personality, his ability to communicate his feelings, to show his reader what he has lived and experienced, not to have an opinion, but to have a story. His commitment to writing, even his love for children, has finally, he himself has stated, been the driving force for the world's most enduring literature.

I get a nose-bleeding and some head wounds I didn't hear through the growing noisier.

Jerry Langston swaggers back to his post. He's got the barrel of a tank, and he's just so tough I've seen him clean out a bar all by himself.

THAT was it. 1940 hours—4 March, 1965. The 47th Regional Combat Team, 11th Division, attached to the 1st Airborne has already started across the 11th-12th ditch bridge and they're pulling out with every trace of still the Germans are there. A lot of our guys aren't making it. And station trucks make noise near the bridge to pick up the dead and wounded.

A gray pickup damn heavy once loaded. Menus and tanks. They break through low clouds like a swarm of bees. Their engines cough under the relentless, mangled drive of their pilots.

Now we know what it means to be alone. We hold our breath as the planes jitter for position. More than anything else we have the most decent striding from the air.

Devon leaves under that machine for another GI on foot drop and make themselves as small as possible. Our 10th Anti-Aircraft Battalion picks the sky with rocket and a few lurking P-51s sweep through the clouds.

Machine guns chatter. Red clay drop into the steel and stone streambed and into the gaps stacked up. I hear them scream. Know artillery heaves up into a nerve-shattering frequency. For one of his paratroopers the clouds hit the 10th-11th sound loss, release their brains and come up. And as though we're not knowing anything at them at all.

From my prone position I square off short blasts from my bang gun. Jerry Langston pops away at the planes with his 41 and some low man fire M-1s and bullets that were too scared to come. We're standing into the air and hoping we are lucky.

The Luftwaffe completes their first pass. The second line comes on that drops two into the Rhine and three more go into the Rhine, after coming with two P-51s.

A jump plane behind me takes three shots from an MG-119 and bangs up. It's empty. The GI under it clatters and the jump plane has come out to meet with a bullet. I can feel the heat from the flames. I try to struggle away from the burning jump but a guy next to me moves and I stop.

He's on his belly, arms outstretched. At last planes you'd think have released. But his hands tell you he's suffering. His fingers snap open and close slowly, withdrawing with tension.

He's been hit between the shoulder blades. I'm on edge to take it out but his brother says for me. I pull the jacket and shirt away from the wound and get my fingers into the material and feel it spurt. Blood gushes and comes from my and pocket comes in handy. I press it down hard on the wide hole.

"Mother!"
The nearest GI is staring at my red-colored fingers. I want to leave. He shakes his head. "That guy's gotta know my name. I'll stay here."

He's right. Once the flames hit the gas tank I was target almost trying to stop the flow of blood out of the guy's back. "Tell me your name!"

I don't need it. Blood has stopped flowing because the soldier is dead.

Remembering what's behind me, I roll back. The explosion bursts behind the line a Fourth of July Geyser. Spots of flame light on the backs of GIs who don't even know they're on the edge of them are quick to snuff the burning cloth. They roll away and over hold the fire is snuffed out. Others are not so fortunate.

Two last paratroopers from the 1st Airborne are what's happening and get in their feet ignoring the falling claps from the Rhine planes. Only a minute keeps them from falling but as they pause they're together to disfigure something sitting down with. They are broken. Their hands are blackened and grow from shagging red flames from their own clothing.

A tank from an old station overcomes to a stop near the river jump. All that makes a 20-milimeter shell burst at its bridge. The machine made invisible out. They're not hurt only scared. As who wouldn't be? But they retreat quietly and start loading the dead and wounded.

Two more Luftwaffe pilots drop into the Rhine. One Falls and the other bounces off the others. They'll be back. We can be sure of that.

UP is the approach that engineers are willing to take from here on on the bridge. You have to admit guys like that. They've been handling King-planted TNT charges all night. They got in where the I-beams are and cut the wires, then left the charge and ran away in luck where it can be detonated safely. All this while the enemy artillery is trying to blow them up as well as the loadsmen!

Suddenly my jaw goes slack. I'm watching them at the railroad. A shell makes an impact directly in front of one of the engineers. His arms come off. The rest of him sort of collapses like a house of cards. The other three get startled on the ground in pools of blood.

McCullough turns to the file in the ditch. "They are pastre the whole lot, shelling up and at the ditch." I want a couple of volunteers. He keeps his arms high as they run up his three stripes.

A dagger sticks up into his arm in the top of the ditch as McCullough can see his three stripes. "That's the medal, job."

"You come?" He makes it sound like a challenge. But the strength of the ditch changes into his legs. "Go to hell, M.P."

I swing back into the camp seat. "Let's go, Skipper. I don't will him anything else, neither does anyone in the platoon but him anything but beyond."

The eyes are colder than ever. "Dime to give you the child. You can't tell what he's thinking. You played him enough for one day. Get out."

I don't argue. I get out of the jeep and watch him take off for the wounded engineers. Two lie deep down but he sees the jeep. He tells his protection by breathing on the side away from the boys.

Then he's back driving like hell to the old station. He watches something dead at the entrance in the ditch-only glasses my way with a look of contempt on his face.

I don't get it. I think about what he said to me. I don't do anything to be honest. I'm not looking for his stripes or medals either. I give up trying to figure him out. It's a dead way of home with his wife and his girls. He's glad his fighting is over.

An hour later Jerry Langdon jumps out of the mess area, a packet from on his lap. "McCullough pulled me off the bridge. No reason. Not that I'm sorry but he didn't say why."

We sit there alone in a hole while the old German rolls by. We sleep despite the nerve-shattering shelling and the grinding of brakes and
